For each item you include, you should provide:

- The name of the food.
- A picture or drawing of the food.
- Details of how the Maya people may have prepared and eaten the food.

Make your inventory bright, colourful and informative and ensure that you include a range of foods.

Maize

Maize was a very important crop, and formed up to 80% of their diet.

To plant the maize, holes would be made in the soil with a sharp bladed, wooden digging stick called a dibble. The soil was very dry and if the May rains didn't come, a whole year's crop would be lost.

For thousands of years, the Maya worshipped the maize god. They believed that the first humans were made by the gods from maize dough! Because of this, when suffering from severe illness, they would eat nothing but corn.

Maya farmers would plant maize wherever they could. Maize is more commonly known as corn.

Marvellous Maize!

Answer the following questions:

1. How was maize grown?
2. Why do you think maize was so important to the Maya people?

Chocaholics!

Cacao trees sprout cacao pods directly from their trunks. The pods are then opened to reveal the cacao beans inside. The Maya were using these beans to make a chocolatey drink from as far back as the fourth century AD. However, it was not the sweet, chocolately flavour we crave today, but a more bitter tasting version, often laced with chilli or vanilla and other spices.

The drink was enjoyed by the rich and noble members of society, and the cacao beans were highly valued. They were even used as a form of currency later on in Maya history.

The Maya word for chocolate is Kakaw.

The Maya used chocolate in religious ceremonies, and they also mixed them with herbs to make medicines.

Cool Cacao

Answer the following questions:
